Proud school wants to be on the move

In the grip of drought and suffering the deprivations of rural decline, the community of St Francis Xavier's Primary School, Lake Cargelligo, is a proud group that works hard to support itself.

SFX, or the "blue" school as it is affectionately known in the district, reflects the cultural diversity of the town with the Aboriginal community bringing a richness to the school which is acknowledged and valued.

Its 74 students suffer another challenge unfamiliar to city families; their isolation. Nearest "large" centres to the Lake's 1300 population are Condobolin 100km away, West Wyalong 116km and Griffith 132km.

"One thing our school really needs is a school bus," says principal Mrs Noreen Dick.

"We had to sell our old bus last year, and the children really miss out sometimes because we simply can't round up enough private cars. Parents are generous, but there are risks involved in private travel, and the cost of petrol is a real blow.

"The natural talents and abilities of the children shine through in drama, art, music and sport. The enthusiasm of these young men and women often takes them far beyond the Lake representing their school in district eisteddfods, public speaking and sporting events.

"Because of our location, the children are by necessity great travellers, and families and staff provide continuing support."

The cost of a 20-seater bus - $100,000 - is daunting. "We would accept any donations towards this with open hearts and hands," Mrs Dick said.

And the school doesn't need to hire a driver. The principal has a bus driver's licence.

Help to restore our heritage

While the planners of Goulburn's old cathedral restoration are depending on government to recognise the historic project's significance by providing the big dollars, ordinary people are playing their part in increas ing numbers. As the appeal ticked past $100,000 on its way to the ultimate goal of $5 million, plans were made to see Prime Minister Mr Howard in Canberra.

Budget cuts set to hit homeless

Some of Canberra's most vulnerable people are in the firing line as a result of ACT Government budget cuts that are forcing Vinnies to revamp their services to homeless families.

The 30 per cent cut in Supported Accommodation Assistance Program funding means a drop of about $320,000 to the St Vincent de Paul Society's special works of Caroline Chisholm and Monica House for women and children, and St Jude's Family Services.

The society has been directed to amalgamate the two houses for women and children and St Jude's. It is in the process of exploring how to maintain the quality of service to the affected families.

Some Vinnies' staff, including the three co-ordinators of the facilities, face redundancy because of the cut-

Three or four women with children are accommodated at Caroline Chisholm, five women with children at Monica House and six families at St Jude's Family Services. They stay for between a couple of weeks and a year depending on their needs.

Vinnies' vice-president for special works Mr Rollo Brett said the facilities were "always full, and the need is significant, desperate and increasing, particularly because there are so few alternative opportunities for accommodation, let alone support and recovery for families."

The society will appoint a co-ordinator of the new service, which will need to be up and running by 1 January next year.

Archdiocesan president Mr Tony Thornton said the society had yet to determine whether the welfare of the families it served would be met by the proposed more restricted service.

Mr Brett said the society was concerned that the close engagement between staff and families would be eroded by the reduction in staff numbers and resulting access to families. "Our experience suggests this engagement has been an important factor in overcoming loneliness, despair, trauma and the everyday crises of families with children. Our ability to be available at every opportunity to assist and advise in resolving issues brought about by homelessness is of critical importance.

"We aspire to do the best for these families despite the changes.

"We are particularly concerned about the children and their wellbeing. We try, in effect, to help them through their parents' crisis in mundane ways such as homework clubs and offering educational and recreational activities, and the opportunity to learn skills for life."

Mr Brett said families in every part of society could experience episodes of conflict resulting in financial difficulties which could lead to eviction and homelessness.

The consequences for the poor were much more significant. Once they were homeless, their ability to return to stability was made doubly difficult due to their inability to access private rental accommodation and the restructured allocation of limited ACT public housing resources.

Mr Brett said the society was greatly concerned about the future of its staff, some of whom had worked for years applying the Vincentian spirit and were passionately devoted to helping families, but now faced losing their jobs.

What are you doing now?

I am teaching Religious Education and Science at Marist College. I also teach Year 12 Senior Biology. I am preparing to take final vows as well which will probably happen next year.

What made you realise your vocation?

The day it dawned upon me that I had to live my own vocation. The brothers who taught me were inspirational, compassionate and down to earth men. I wanted to be like them. As time went by and my religious formation 'kicked in' I realised that if God was calling me to be Marist brother and I was called to be myself - a human being trying to do some good in the world. Now I realise I am called to live Marist Brotherhood because I love what I do and it makes sense to me.

What have been your greatest challenges in your vocation?

Often being a religious under the age of 30 in a culture that finds commitment and Religion difficult to comprehend can be difficult. My family also found me joining the brothers very difficult and I found that hard at the start. Things have changed for both my fam-

my life

In the ninth in a monthly series on vocations of all kinds, we speak to Marist Brother Anthony Robertson.

ily and me and things are much better now. I've grown now to see that I don't have to justify what I do to others when they say 'Why did you do it?'

behind the news

What are the best times for you?

Being in community and being in ministry. I thoroughly enjoy teaching but also interacting with the boys through sport and community activities at school. The best times for me are seeing the potential of the boys and them achieving their best. Being with the brothers and sharing our common faith and charism is fantastic. The brothers have taught me much about religious life and myself.

What leisure interests do you enjoy?

I enjoy socialising with people and going out to catch up over coffee. I enjoy being in big cities and seeing as much as I can and soaking up the atmosphere.

What would you say to someone considering the religious life?

We are still here, we are still alive and we are as relevant now as much as we were 30 years ago. I would also tell them to be courageous and open to where God was calling them. You can't swim unless you get in the water!

Your hopes for yourself, your order/ community, your Church in 2006?

My hope for the brothers is that we still take the risks to stand up for our faith and our work within the Church and maintain our standards for what we see is the vision for Catholic Education. I hope the Church continues to be open to the Holy Spirit moving through the Institution and working through us to challenge and change God's people. I hope I can remain authentic to my call and my own sense of being a true brother to the members of my order and those who I work with in ministry.

Not just another birthday

Like every other day of the week, Tuesday, 25 July, found Sr Mary Fabian Mills (pictured right) - a sister of St Joseph of Goulburn beginning her day with 7am Mass in the convent chapel. This day was sister's birthday and during the day she graciously smiled as many sisters and friends called in to say hello and wish her well. The usual photos were taken, a balloon heralding the joyful day could be seen and a special birthday cake was cut and eaten. There was even a card from her beloved Swans football team to mark the occasion.

It was no ordinary day, however, but the celebration of Sr Fabian's 104th birthday.

It is no surprise to find her engaged in various activities in the aged care facility at the convent. A game of bingo, an and exercise program, a stroll around the garden (in her wheelchair), the occasional drive and watching the Swans are all features of her weekly routine.

It would seem that Sister's answer to a long, healthy and contented life can be found in her daily devotion to Mass and prayer, a constant interest and participation in what is happening around her, and an appreciation of the care and love of her sisters, her family and those who care for her.

ticipation of people with disability and their families in the life of the Church. One such active person is Canberra's Luke Mowbray, who this year started to help with the delivery of Catholic Voice each month. His story will be in the book, "We Have a Story". Here is a preview:

My name is Luke. I deliver the Catholic Voice once a month. My boss is Geoff Orchison. We meet Geoff at the Canberra Times very early in the morning and pack up the car. Mum drives me around to the drop off places. I put the papers on my trolley, sometimes it is very heavy.

I deliver the papers to the Cathedral, to the Catholic Education Office and to the bookshop and some other places. The Catholic Voice tells everyone about what is happening in our Church in Canberra and Goulburn.

I like working for Geoff, he is a good boss. Geoff pays me some money and then I go to McDonalds and buy a thick shake. I also collect paper to shred from all the Catholic Offices in Canberra. Everyone is very nice to me and they save lots of paper for me to shred. I shred the paper and then I sell it to the pet shops.

NEW LEADER:

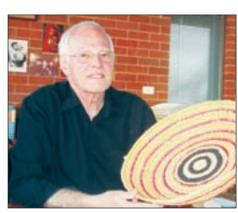

Br Greg McDonald will be the new community leader of the Marist Brothers in Canberra next year. He will succeed the much-loved Br Mark May, who is completing his term in the position.

Br Mark will continue to be a member of the Canberra brothers' community and is looking forward to a break after nearly a lifetime of Marist leadership.

Backers big and small for old cathedral appeal

While the planners of Goulburn's old cathedral restoration are depending on government to recognise the historic project's significance by providing the big dollars, ordinary people are playing their part in increasing

As the appeal last month ticked past $100,000 on its way to the ultimate goal of $5 million, arrangements were made to see Prime Minister Mr Howard in Canberra.

project patron and Commonwealth Bank head Mr David Murray and Archbishop Mark Coleridge were due to meet with Mr Howard late last month in the wake of bipartisan support from federal politicians for restoring St Peter and Paul's Church, described as the only greenstone cathedral in

This month the appeal hits Sydney with a lunch which NSW Premier Mr Morris Iemma is expected to attend.

Organisers hope federal, state and local government will provide something in excess of $3.5 million to the appeal.

Backing has come from across the community ranging from $10,000 given by a Goulburn parishioner, to $106.52 from a group of elderly shut-in parishioners who are unable to attend St Peter and Paul's but wanted to show their support and $25 from a Riverina man who was an altar server in the church in 1927. Businesspeople in Goulburn and beyond are being asked to contribute.

Archbishop Coleridge, who celebrated Mass in St Peter and Paul's on the Sunday following his installation, says the restoration work is a way of "saying thanks for the past and saying yes to the future".

Goulburn parish priest Fr Tony Percy said the project was about "restoration and maintaining what we have that is good.

"We are asking people to consider our one thousand club; 1000 people giving $1000 equals $1 million. Because contributions are tax-deductible through the NSW division of the National Trust of Australia, giving is attractive. Of course many won't be able to afford a thousand bucks, but they can consider prayerfully what is within their means.

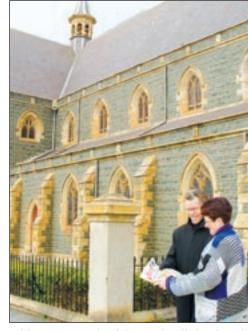

"We are not asking people to just give money willy nilly. Rather, giving in the Church has a real theological meaning. Giving generously is symbolic of the gift of self. So many before us have given of themselves and symbolised this by giving financially. We are simply asking our generation to step up and take the 'baton of faith', run with it and then hand it on to the generation in waiting. For this reason, this project is extremely exciting.

"This building has local, national and international significance and is the only greenstone cathedral in the world."

The first part of the cathedral was completed in 1871, 10 years before the first stage of the current St Mary's Cathedral in Sydney.

Fr Percy intends that displays will be mounted to give schools, tour groups and other visitors an idea of the part the old cathedral and Goulburn played in the early history of the diocese and the Church in Australia, stretching back to the visits to the district of pioneer priest Fr Therry in the late 1820s and later by the legendary Archbishop Polding.

Although the project is due to be completed in 2009, much of the work will be done in time for an expected large influx of young visitors for World Youth Day in 2008.

The original sanctuary lamp, tabernacle doors and brass objects have already been sent away for restoration. This month the old altar rails, Pugin lectern and baptismal font will follow.

The fleche, an ornate spire, a cross and the statues of St Peter and St Paul will be taken down off the roof in coming weeks and repaired.

The challenge is aimed at inspiring Year 9 and 10 students to study science in college and beyond.

It is presented by the University of Newcastle, the ANU, Engineers Australia, national ICT Australia and Business ACT.

It is an initiative supported by the Australian Government through the Department of Education, Science and Training.

Team supervisor Mr Matthew Pearce said the victory was a testament to the science program at the college.

"We beat some of the best schools in NSW," he said.

"We missed out narrowly last year, but we have such dedicated students and staff that we were always going to be a big presence in the competition. Now, we definitely aim to win it."

Pray and reflect: call to women

Women of the Archdiocese have been called to prayer and reflection. The challenge was one of the initiatives emerging from an archdiocesan Commission for Women meeting, attended by Archbishop Mark Coleridge.

A women's prayer day and workshop will be held in Canberra on 22 November, providing both a time for reflection and a message which organisers hope will be taken back to parishes across the region.

Archbishop Coleridge was very positive about the contribution that could be made by the Commission for Women to the life of the Church in the

He commented on the evangelising and charismatic contribution women have always made in the life of the Church in Australia, and their particularly strong gifts of reconciliation, interfaith dialogue and peacemaking.

Archbishop Coleridge spoke of his desire to "stir up energies of prayer" in the Archdiocese, vitally necessary in what he described as "the deep and confusing time of transition" being experienced in the Church in Australia.

He encouraged the commission to think imaginatively about women's leadership roles.

The commission's recently released vision statement includes a focus on providing opportunities for critical reflection on who Catholic women are in the contemporary church by creating opportunities for prayerful reflection and scripture study. It also intends to affirm the role of women in ministry, particularly in pastoral support of each other by promoting opportunities for women's ministry formation.

The prayer workshop will be offered in two sessions, 10am to 12.30pm and 7.30pm to 9pm on 22 November. Inquiries: Margaret Ryan, e-mail adult.ed@ cg.catholic.org.au

Divorce still 'hard' question

Divorce, remarriage, annulment and reception of the sacraments has headed the list of issues in the Church which people across the Archdiocese have signalled cause them concern.

A wide range of topics have been on the agenda of six pastoral forums held in city and country parishes to continue the conversation on the "hard questions" identified during the 2004 Archdiocese Synod process.

Another session will be held from 7pm to 9.30pm on 17 October at Evatt parish.

The panel addressing issues about Catholic Church teaching or practice which causes concern has included Bishop Pat Power, Fr John Woods, Fr Julian Wellspring, Fr Brian Lucas, Sr Elizabeth Delaney, Gemma and Bill Duffy and Ms Margaret

They have run forums at Nimmitabel, Temora, Gundagai, Narooma, Yarralumla and Goulburn. At each venue, a process was used to collect questions and to record them for all to see.

By far the most common topic raised was that of marriage breakdown with many participants being personally involved or having a family member affected.

Other issues have included:

- the meaning of "keep holy the Sabbath";
- sacraments (the order of receiving the sacraments, the Third Rite of Reconciliation, parish sacramental programs, baptism and godparents, possible venues for marriages, reception of communion by people who are not Catholic, and reception by Catholics of communion in other churches, people with disabilities being prepared for and receiving the sacraments);
- how to be more hospitable and welcoming (eg, of single parent families, alienated Catholics);
- how to live the Church's mission (how to support families/ people in distress, in times of
- the priesthood (concern for the ageing and dwindling number of active priests, possible roles for laicised priests, married priests, women
- youth (young people's appreciation of, and attendance at, Mass; how the Church can engage with youth, how to address moral issues with young people);
- attitudes of the "churched" (towards single parents and those in defacto relationships, judgemental and prejudiced attitudes versus encouraging loving relationships);
- life issues (homosexuality, use of natural family planning, contraception, fertility and embryonic stem cell issues);
- need for formation (how to become and remain informed about one's faith);
 - inclusive language;
 - the new missal.

Evaluations were conducted at each venue.

Many people expressed their appreciation for "the intelligent and clear format" (Bombala); "listening to each other" (priest); "excellent panel feedback" (Monaro); "the process used" (Cootamundra); "the open, honest discussion" (Temora); "good interaction between participants and presenters" (priest); "everyone's concerns were received and dealt with in a way that was respectful and non-judgmental" (Gundagai); "many questions I had had for some time were answered" (Gundagai); "the openness of answers to all questions"

Sr Elizabeth Delaney wrote short brochures on homosexuality, the divorced and remarried and sharing in sacraments to give to participants.

Anyone who would like a copy may contact Ms Margaret Ryan, Centre for Faith and Ministry, telephone 6201 9802 or e-mail: adult.ed@cg.catholic.

Prayer, the most natural thing of all

For the first time I put pen to paper for Catholic Voice, and I want to begin by thanking Geoff Orchison who is the key to its production. I also want to encourage all of you to read of it regularly. The Voice is a unique way of staying in touch with what's happening in the Church beyond our own backyard.

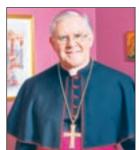

The Catholic Church is much bigger than we think, and the Catholic press is one way of tuning into that bigness. So read on. We're also working on the website, so check that out, too.

In these years, the Holy Spirit is calling us as a Church to become more missionary: of that I am sure. But we can become more missionary only if we become more mystical, by which I mean open to every dimension of human life, including God above all.

That's why, as I said at my installation, we have to learn to pray in new and deeper ways. Otherwise, we will end up shrinking into one little corner of human life, thinking that that's all there is. The world will grow too small.

So I ask: How might our families, our schools and our parishes become genuine schools of prayer? Prayer is the most natural thing of all for the human being. We long for God, often without realising it; our hearts cannot rest until they find God, even though we often seek rest elsewhere. Looking for the right thing in the wrong place is St Augustine's brilliant definition of sin. Prayer is our true rest, as the human heart finds its way back to God from whom it came. That's why it's the most natural thing of all.

But we are like people who have had a stroke. We have to re-learn the most basic and natural skills of living. Sin is like a stroke, and that's why prayer often feels unnatural. A school of prayer is a place of post-sin therapy, where we re-learn the natural language of the heart. We re-learn the greatest and most basic of all arts, the art of listening and speaking to God whom we love.

Family prayer is not what it once was, and given the rhythms of family life these days, it can be very hard work. I have no illusions on that score.

But can we imagine new ways of family prayer? Are there other ways - visual perhaps - of evoking the presence of God in the home?

The patterns of prayer in schools are also different than they once were. But can our schools find new ways of teaching the young how to inhabit silence comfortably and even to love silence in the midst of an incredibly noisy world where silence seems a threat?

Can we create in our schools through the day moments of awareness of God, a growing sense of his presence? Can we find words of prayer to place on the heart of the young?

In our parishes, can we open in new ways the treasures of the Catholic tradition of prayer, the mystical tradition so luminous in many of the great saints?

Can our experience of the liturgy become more contemplative, wrapped in the silence of God from which alone come words of praise worthy of the mystery we celebrate at the

These are questions that have been much in my mind and heart - and in my own prayer - since I said "yes" to the call to be Archbishop of Canberra and Goulburn. I urge the entire archdiocesan community to join me now in grappling with these questions.

Any suggestions you may have to make our families, schools and parishes more effective schools of prayer would be welcome. As St Benedict says, God may speak even through the youngest. But before we can speak, we must listen. That's why it's important that each of us look to our own prayer-life and, in new and deeper ways, listen to God who is communicating now no less than he did in the past, even if he is speaking perhaps in accents that are new.

Israel the victim

We can all echo the horror at suffering expressed by Bishop Power and the Anglican Bishop Browning when they said it was impossible to remain silent in the face of so much pain and suffering in the Middle East. (CV, September).

However, how is it that they ignore the fact that for years Israel has been the victim of constant bombardment from Hezbollah rockets and suicide bombers? They seem to ride a populist wave which ignores the origin of this latest conflict.

I would like to know how Bishop Power would react if he lived in northern Israel and were the victim of the constant bombing. For my part I have written to the parents of the kidnapped Israeli soldiers saying that my Catholic friends and I stand in solidarity with them. They wrote back thanking me for my care.

I also stand in solidarity with the Lebanese victims of war. But Hezbollah are the well funded, Iranian-supported origin of it all.

Why did Bishop Power not stand at the Lebanese Embassy and demand the disarming of Hezbollah by the Lebanese leaders? Unlike Bishop Power and Browning at least that is what the Lebanese have recognised they have to do now.

Holy Spirit alive

I am writing to express my strong support for the views expressed by Archbishop Coleridge in his installation homily.

God's call for the renewal of the Church's work in the world was clear from time Pope John XXIII first announced his intention to summon the Second Vatican Council.

Sadly, there were many voices at the time and since which opposed that view. In fact, in more recent years, there have been attempts by more conservative parties to reverse the positions taken by the Council.

Not that the Council's work was ever complete in itself. Renewal is an ongoing process, as life in the Church bears witness.

The Holy Spirit is alive and speaking vigorously in the hearts of all, both within the Church and in the wider world. My hope and prayer is that God may also give us the willingness to listen to the Spirit, and the courage to act in response to the message. I wish Archbishop Coleridge well as he participates in that process.

Married Apostles

I refer to the letter by JL Smith (CV, July) headed "Mutually Exclusive". May I remind the author that there is biblical evidence that some, if not all, of the Apostles were married; there was a married clergy in the Roman church up to the Middle Ages; and that the Eastern Rites have always had a married clergy.

Brigadier Peter J A Evans (Retd), Garran.

Jarring note

The ceremony to welcome our new Archbishop was marred by the choice of hymns and by the volume of the musicians.

I have always understood that the function of the choir was to encourage the community to sing. The function of the musicians is to accompany the choir in such a way as to assist the choir and the congregation in their singing.

The hymns appear to have been chosen to showcase the choir. It is so many years since the Creed was sung in Latin at a High Mass that practically no-one, apart from the choir, knew the words.

Certainly there would have been very few there who would have been able to understand the meaning of the words, and it is trivial to say that we should all know

But, further, there were hymns in the ceremony which were dedicated to choir only. There are instructions in the liturgy documents that this should not happen. Lastly, for most of the ceremony the musicians were so loud that the words of the hymns sung solo by the choir could not be understood.

I am surprised that the choirmaster from the Cathedral is not aware of the restrictions placed on both the choir and the musicians.

I sincerely hope that this is not the start of a trend in music that we will hear at the Cathedral or at any other church.

Larry Phillips, Narooma.

No music, please

I recently availed myself of the rare joy of attending a Sunday Mass where devotion to the service and quiet contemplation were afforded due to the absence of people to whom the words "choir' and "musicians" could never be aptly ascribed.

Why is it that congregations must be commonly assailed by the cacophony of persons unable to sing either in tune or in time with each other, and whose selection of hymns are unfamiliar to the majority of those obliged to listen to them?

Moreover, their choices invariably contain notes and chords unattainable by themselves let alone other worshippers, who are often more embarrassingly amused by the solo and joint efforts than imbued with any feelings of seraphic elation. A visitor from overseas once commented to me that if beautiful music is intended to glorify God, couldn't what he had just heard be classified as an abuse of the Almighty? Parishes should seriously consider having at least one choir-free service each weekend and advertise it for the benefit of all.

Trinity girl boarders on move

Students at St Joseph's Primary School in Goulburn will get much-needed extra space next year when the city's Catholic college girl boarders move.

The Sisters of St Joseph at the end of this year will hand over ownership of the Marian boarding residence in Reynolds Street to the Trustees of the Archdiocese of Canberra and Goulburn for educational purposes.

This follows a decision by Archbishop Mark Coleridge, on the recommendation of the Archdiocesan Catholic Education Commission, to co-locate all Trinity Catholic College boarding students at the St Patrick's campus in 2007.

The commission took on responsibility for the management of boys and girls boarding from the Christian Brothers and the Sisters of St Joseph at the beginning of this year.

Commission chairman Mr Daryl Smeaton said co-location of the boarders was "a great opportunity to keep the boarding option at Trinity College open and accessible to people in surrounding NSW. "We are thrilled by the great generosity of the Sisters of St Joseph in handing over the Marian Residence property to support Catholic primary schooling in Goulburn."

The safety and well being of the boarders was of paramount importance in the decision to colocate them. He assured parents that appropriate supervision, support and upgraded facilities would be provided to ensure the continuity of care previously given by the Sisters of St Joseph and the Christian Brothers over many years.

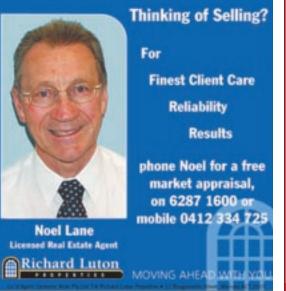

Josephite Congregational Leader Sr Noelene Quinane said the transfer of the property to the Archdiocese was an extension of the spirit of the Sisters' mission. "The Sisters of St Joseph have supported Catholic education in Goulburn for 125 years. The use of these facilities by St Joseph's school will ensure our presence and our service to Catholic education in Goulburn will continue well into the future."

Goulburn parish priest Fr Tony Percy said the Sisters' decision would "significantly enhance the education facilities for St Joseph's Primary School. The property will also provide extra playing space for students."

Planning is under way to refurbish St Patrick's boarding residence to make it suitable for male and female boarders.

No need to duck the kitchen heat for Eddies' winning chefs Heat is obviously no problem for two St Edmund's College students James Carter and Anthony Magro.

The pair have taken to hot kitchens and the pressure of hot competition like, well, ducks to water.

In recent months, they won gold at the ACT Schools Culinary Championships and then went on to repeat that success at the Australian Culinary Championships for school students.

On 28 October on the Gold Coast, they will tackle even tougher overseas competition when they represent Australia at the International Secondary Schools Culinary Challenge.

Their special dish? Duck. Its full description is assiette of duck featuring twice cooked leg, lacquered crown roasted breast and duck neck sausage served with a mushroom cream essence, cashew nut and capsicum chutney, petit melange of vegetables and duck

mushroom and chive wonton

Anthony and James spent countless hours preparing for the national competition, planning the menu, practising cooking the dish many times and preparing as much of the food as allowed in the lead up, under the watchful eye and expert guidance of Mr Dean Parkes and Ms Paula Moeller.

They took much of their own cooking equipment and spent the afternoon before the contest checking kitchen facilities to ensure that they were fully prepared for what lay ahead.

On competition day James and Anthony stunned judges with their knife skills, menu design and the complexity and skill level required to produce their dish.

Ms Moeller said the dishes presented beautifully and judges described the students' skills as incredible.

Help Keep Christianity Alive in Bethlehem

Today, as you read this, poverty and oppression are driving Christian faithful from the Holy Land. But you can help give our suffering brothers and sisters in Christ a reason to stay.

Through a program we developed to support the distribution of small nativity scenes handcrafted of local olive wood by Catholic artisans, Aid to the Church in Need is reaching out to faithful in need across the Holy Land. We provide a simple, dignified, and effective means for struggling faithful to keep food on the table for their families.

Please help us strengthen and rebuild the Church.

A beautiful, handcrafted crib made of olive wood from the Holy Land will be sent free of charge to anyone making a donation of $15 or more to support the projects of Aid to the Church in Need in Bethlehem.

School fee Wallabies show life skills claim slammed

A newspaper report that Catholic school fees will soar next year is a gross exaggeration, the ACT Catholic Education Commission says.

Commission chairman Mr Daryl Smeaton said the body would make a recommendation on tuition fees to Archbishop Mark Coleridge after its next meeting.

The reported change from a family fee to a perstudent fee in Catholic primary schools had been made to distribute the cost of education more equitably, he said.

The commission recognised the impact of school fees on families and aimed to keep any increase to a minimum.

The article in the Canberra Times rightly pointed out that the ACT Catholic schools system received the lowest level of per-student funding from the Commonwealth and Territory/ State governments, but incorrectly implied the ACT Government indexes funding by 4.8 per cent.

This was the territory's official inflation rate for the last financial year, but the Government only applied indexation on the basis of its original estimate of inflation which was 2.5 per cent.

"The commission trusts that the reported comment by Education Minister Andrew Barr that there were no plans to review the ACT Government's funding formula for private schools' is also a reporting error." Mr Smeaton said. "A review of the funding formula was one of the Stanhope Government's commitments to Catholic school parents prior to the last election.'

Students from St Francis Xavier College joined students from more than 30 ACT schools in a forum on learning life values with three members of the Wallabies rugby team.

Tala Sefo, Matthew Ryan, Tom Robbins and Patrick Turnbull attended the launch of the "Spirit of Rugby" program, an Australian Rugby Union initiative to teach life values to young Australians through forums with players and sportsmanship awards for students.

As part of the Wallabies Stirling Mortlock, Al Baxter and local product Guy Sheperdson spoke of their experiences as school students and Wallabies, and how using values such as pride, teamwork, camaraderie, doing your best and respect for others had shaped aspects of their personal lives and playing careers.

Chatting with (back) Stirling Mortlock, Guy Sheperdson and Al Baxter are Matthew Ryan, Tala Sefo, Thomas Robbins, Patrick Turnbull and Peter Marrapodi.

World is a sacrament

Treasure all aspects of life and take nothing for granted was the message of US author Kathy Coffey, who visited the Archdiocese. She is the of books including "Experiencing God with your Children", "Hidden Women of the Gospels", and "Children and Christian Initiation". She quoted St Augustine: "If you have an eye for it, the world itself is a sacrament." Small "s" sacraments are ways of encountering God, of being in touch with God's extravagant love and affection.

Clergy and cultures Fathers appeal

A US sociologist who has written a book on the challenges of importing priests from different cultures will give a talk in Canberra this month.

Prof Dean Hoge, from the Catholic University of America, will speak on Future Church Fewer Priests: Options for Mission will speak in the Blackfriars Room at Australian Catholic University's Canberra campus at 6pm on Thursday, 12 October. Prof Hoge has spent three decades researching American religion, producing 16 books and 100 scholarly articles.

During his visit to Australia, he will draw on the findings of his studies to discuss topics such as young adult Catholics, how they are different, and what they think of the institutional Church; international priests serving in the US, the problems and the possibilities; the priest shortage and options for carrying out the mission of the Church; and trends in priestly life.

His latest book, International Priests in America: Challenges and Opportunities, examines the phenomenon of bringing in priests from developing countries to work in American parishes as priestly vocations decline. He is brought to Australia by the Pastoral Projects Office of the Australian Catholic Bishops Conference.

The inaugural Father's Day Appeal to support retired clergy has had a wonderful response across the Archdiocese.

Secretary of the Clergy Retirement Foundation Mr Kevin Croker said parish and individual collections had almost reached the appeal target of $40,000 which was indicative of the high regard the Catholic community has for its retired priests. "Many people have commented that the appeal allows people to show their appreciation for the many years of service retired priests gave to their parish," he said. Donations may be left with parishes or sent to the Secretary, Clergy Retirement Foundation, GPO Box 3089, Canberra 2601. All donations will be acknowledged with a tax deductible gift receipt.

Indigenous plight plea

"How can it be that in this land of plenty, the average life expectancy of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people is 17 years less than for non-indigenous Australians?" Australia's bishops ask in the annual Catholic Social Justice Sunday Statement.

The statement, The Heart of Our Country, draws on the historic Alice Springs address of Pope John Paul II to the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples of Australia.

The statement invites reflection on what Australia has achieved in responding to the Pope's challenge to support indigenous culture and pursue true reconciliation.

"In a nation that enjoys a vibrant economy, where governments boast of their careful financial management, the question remains: why have we not been able to eliminate these dire circumstances from the everyday experience of many indigenous people, they ask."

Deanes back fund to help rural students

Former Governor-General Sir William Deane and Lady Deane have agreed to become joint patrons of a scholarship appeal set up in honour of Archbishop Francis Carroll to support students from rural and regional communities.

Australian Catholic University launched the Francis Carroll Scholarship Appeal this year to help students in the Archdiocese of Canberra and Goulburn and the Wagga Wagga Diocese attend the Canberra campus.

The scholarships will provide financial support to students in their first year on campus.

ACU National has provided seed funding for the appeal and support has also been provided by the Archdiocese of Canberra and Goulburn, Catholic Education Office and the Catholic Education Commission as well as a number of individual donors.

"We are delighted and honoured to be joint patrons of the Francis Carroll Scholarship Appeal," Sir William and Lady Deane said.

"Father Francis has been a truly inspirational leader of the Catholic Church both in the Archdiocese of Canberra and Goulburn, and nationally.

"This scholarship offers the opportunity for all of us who have benefited from his leadership, his Please return to GreaterGood and his pastoral care to mark our appreciation of his invaluable work by helping provide support, in his name, to students from rural communities who face particular economic challenges."

Fund-raising committee chairman Dr Ray Storrier said Archbishop Carroll was passionate about the welfare of rural and regional areas, and the education of young people from those areas.

The appeal committee was seeking the support of the community to grow the fund so that three to five scholarships of $2000 could be awarded each year.

Donations may be made to The Francis Carroll Scholarship Fund and sent to GreaterGood (Capital Regional Community Foundation), a Canberra-based charitable trust that supports local philanthropic causes. Inquiries: Bea Brickhill, telephone 6209 1194.

From fruit farmer to teacher to helper of the homeless, it has been an eventful 80 years for Tuggeranong parishioner Jack Evans.

Mr Evans and wife Margaret retired to Canberra in 2002, although they continue to be active in the Corpus Christi parish, St Vincent de Paul Society, in which he has served for 54 years, the married couples movement Teams, and Disciples of Jesus Covenant Community.

Mr Evans celebrated his 80th birthday at Mass in the Sacred Heart Church, Calwell, followed by

The Evans married in 1953 and became fruit farmers in Kyabram, where they had six children, and became active in the St Vincent de Paul Society as volunteers working with the disadvantaged.

When fruit farming became uneconomic, he studied for three years at Aquinas College Ballarat under principal, later Cardinal, George Pell. At the age of 50 he graduated as a teacher.

Mr Evans taught for five years before being drawn to the plight of the homeless. The Evans moved to Darwin in 1981 to manage a St Vincent De Paul Society overnight shelter. Mr Evans later helped set up Tanami lodge as a home for drug and alcohol affected people.

He convinced the then Bishop of Darwin John O'Loughlin to give a cyclone-ravaged property to Vinnies to develop what is now Bakhita Village for longer-term accommodation for the homeless to rehabilitate them. He got the property, got the finance and single-handedly took on its long-term management.

The bishop asked him to involve himself in the Apostolate of the Sea, Stella Maris Seafarer's Association. He helped them upgrade their property, got a 99-year lease, arranged finance and developed accommodation for visiting sailors. It is now a $1million-a-year venture.

The Evans are well known for their support and love for those in need and for treating all with dignity and honour. Many stories are told about how they have paid out of their own pocket to help others with fares, to send a body home, or to fix a car.

In a toast for his 80th birthday, long time friend Vince Burns said the couple "give of themselves wholeheartedly to those who they do not know, to those who will never be able to repay, to those who are in need. Jack and Margaret are the quintessential Australians, Christians and Catholics."

In response, Mr Evans said: "I've had a happy life because I always enjoyed everything I did. I enjoy helping people."

Life for all: is it possible?

I was hungry and you gave me food, I was thirsty and you gave me something to drink, I was a stranger and you welcomed me, I was naked and you gave me clothing, I was sick and you took care of me, I was in prison and you visited me ... just as you did it to one of the least of these who are members of my family, you did it to me (Matthew 25:35-40).

World Mission Month 2006 will be celebrated in every Catholic community around the world, culminating in World Mission Day on Sunday, 22 October.

This year's theme, "Life for All?", questions whether it's possible for the entire world's people to be given the opportunity to develop their full potential, both physically and spiritually.

Inspired by the Bible passage above, celebrations will focus on how God calls everyone to work for the liberation of humanity as part of God's plan of salvation for all.

There are many ways in which people can mark World Mission Month.

One of the simplest is to wear a "Life for All" sticker. This is a public way of saying that people commit themselves to actively promoting fullness of Stickers are available through schools and parishes and by contacting Catholic Mission directly.

Catholic Mission has produced school and parish kits to assist with fundraising, education and animation.

In his message for Mission Sunday, Pope Benedict XVI says the occasion provides an opportunity to reflect on the theme "Charity, Soul of Mission".

However, he cautions that unless charity flows from a profound act of love, it risks being reduced to a mere philanthropic Mission is for everyone. While missionaries serve on the front line of evangelisation, they are accompanied and helped by the prayers and sacrifices of Catholic Mission national director Fr Terry Bell says there can only be one answer to the question "Life for all?".

"We ask whether it is really possible to bring about 'Life for All' in a world where so often access to the Good News is restricted or stifled by the circumstances of life; starvation, lack of medical care and basic education, just to name a few," he said.

"However, the resurrection of Jesus in his situation of death and hopelessness tells us to never give up.

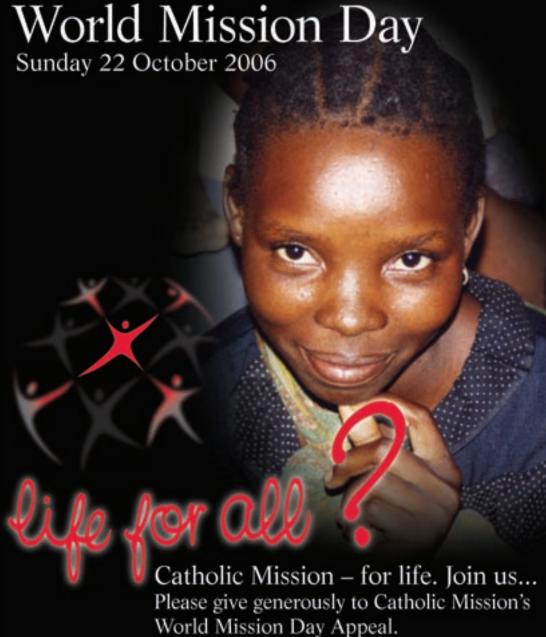

"Our faith gives us hope, not just for ourselves but for every person on the planet, regardless of how difficult their situation may be."

RIGHT: Dorothy Makasa (centre with glasses and yellow headwear) speaks to local villagers in Zambia.

Imagine living in a country in which the average life expectancy is just 37 years. One in five of your friends and family members is HIV positive. Your children are at risk of succumbing to malaria. Health and education services are grossly inadequate. Privatisation means it's too expensive to grow your own food and unemployment is high. Where do you turn?

When Dorothy Makasa was growing up in Zambia she turned to the local mission - it was so integral to her community that it served as both the school and the hospital.

St Therese's Ibenga Mission at Luanshwa cared for those with tuberculosis and leprosy and the blind and disabled, including one of Dorothy's brothers who was crippled with polio.

"I just took the missionaries and the money to run the projects for granted," Dorothy said. "Now that I know Catholic Mission I understand where this money is coming from and why it's so important."

After many years of working for non-government organisations for the improvement of her people, Dorothy immigrated to Australia. Now her mission is to help those left behind, including her 11 brothers and sisters and their families. "I started collecting five-cent pieces to buy pencils for my nieces and nephews. But my brothers and sisters said there were so many people worse off than them," Dorothy said. "When the children and mothers

Giving people reason to hope see somebody buying them a pencil or a pen they know they're not the forgotten people."

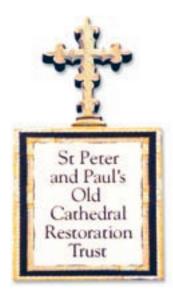

The situation in Zambia is not hopeless - the country is now almost debt free and the government is trying to improve services. But they need help. Last year Catholic Mission supported Zambia with more than $1.6 million through the work of Partnering Local Churches and Communities. For example, in the Livingstone Diocese, Catholic Mission funded the formation of 26 full-time and 100 part-time catechists.

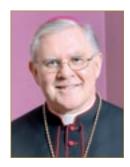

People in the Archdiocese of Canberra and Goulburn can help the Church to remain a beacon of hope in Zambia, and in 159 other countries, by supporting the World Mission Month appeal.

Dorothy will launch World Mission Month in dioceses around Australia this month.

Help to restore our heritage

St Peter & Paul's Old Cathedral Goulburn Restoration Appeal

Recently I was delighted to visit for the first time the old Cathedral of Sts Peter and Paul in Goulburn, which stands as a monument to a great story of missionary energy and deep faith.

As the green of the stone flashes in the sun, the Cathedral speaks of the Irish in the Antipodes who built it.

May the planned restoration give new life not only to a grand old church but also to the community of faith that gathers there still to celebrate the mysteries of Christ.

May the restoration work be a way of saying thanks for the past and saying yes to the future.

Laughter to tickle the soul

Live, Laugh and be Blessed, by Anne Bryan Smollin. Sorin Books, Indiana 2006. 123pp, pb, rrp $28.95. Reviewer: Margaret Ryan.

Yes, it's another book encouraging us to review our priorities, to help us "feel good" and act more authentically and positively. It's about laughter. Laughter and joy help us to appreciate the beauty of the moment. When shared, they bless us and others, make connections, suspend worries, relieve stress, improve imagination and creativity, keep us in control of ourselves.

In fact, laughter lightens the load, avoids negativity, unites hearts, gathers people together, heals heartache, tickles the soul, energises the human spirit and restores us to wholeness and holiness. Laughter is a gift and a choice.

Sr Anne has interwoven many cultures' proverbs and stories to illustrate the benefit of laughter, and is not afraid to laugh at herself. At times mildly instructional, the predominant tone is one of commonsense, gentle wisdom and shared fun. She believes, quoting Julian of Norwich, "The fullness of joy is to behold God in everything.'

Henri Nouwen, university lecturer, priest, writer, gentle pastor, soul friend and resident of L'Arche community, died in

A new publication is a posthumous book on spiritual direction compiled by two editors, both former students of Nouwen. They draw on his sermons, articles, journal records, class lecture notes, published writings and unpublished manuscripts to produce the book just before the 10th anniversary of his death. It is written in the first person as if Nouwen was speaking.

The intention is to provide an experience of doing spiritual direction with Henri Nouwen, mediated through his writings and recommended exercises. The book was designed both for spiritual directors and those seeking direction, and aims to encourage personal reflection and engagement with others.

did Nouwen think of spiritual direction? As "a relationship initiated by a spiritual seeker who finds a mature person of faith willing to pray and respond with wisdom and understanding to his/her questions about how to live spiritually in a world of ambiguity and distraction."

The book is structured around 10 questions for living the spiritual life (eg, Where have I been and where am I going? Who is God for me? How can I be of service?). Each question is linked with parables, personal stories, scriptural reflections as well as exercises for spiritual direction and journal responses.

In the midst of life's busyness, many of us can forget the really important questions: eg, Do I live my life as a beloved of God? Do I surrender to the temptation to be independent, compulsive or to reject my true self as seen by God? How well and how regularly do I make time and space for prayer?

Nouwen writes passionately yet gently, vulnerably and inclusively. He challenges the reader because the questions he raises are pivots for a full human life as well as eternal life. Highly recommended.

an introduction to the man from Nazareth, by John Dickson. Blue Bottle Books, Sydney 2005. 161 pp, pb, rrp $22.95. Reviewer: Margaret Ryan.

The Jesus of public imagination in modern Western societies is often based on false information and assumption.

Dickson, John Australian Anglican priest, historian, academic and author, sets out to provide some balance. Was Jesus peasant, radical, sacrificial lamb, God?

After establishing his parameters and briefly outlining historical sources for Jesus' life, the author examines a dozen facets of Jesus ("the 'business cards' of Jesus are many and varied"): as Teacher, Healer, "Israel," Christ, Judge, Friend, "Temple," Saviour, "Adam," "Caesar," God and Servant.

Dickson writes for a contemporary audience, whether Christian or not. He does not assume much knowledge of scripture or life in Jesus' time.

His easy conversational style draws on aspects of his own journey, including his "interesting" youth, and these form parallels with, and back-

While he draws on professional theologians, Dickson's aim here is to connect with the average person. ("Rising from the dead was simply not part of anyone's job description for greatness.") The foreword comes from Peter Garrett.

He writes with an Australian audience in mind. "The huge Jerusalem temple, a site approximately the size of Stadium Australia."

At the end of each chapter are some reflections (personal or with a group) and when looking at the Australian (lack of real) response to the needy, he quotes 2005 statistics.

In passing, the author responds to some aspects of Brown's DaVinci Code, and indicates a difference between a Christian's and a Muslim's

What emerges in the book is not a "tidy, monolithic Jesus, but ... a complex, multi-layered and, at times, contradictory figure."

This is a great book, giving some historical and theological introduction to Jesus the Christ.

If readers are disturbed and intrigued, Dickson will count himself successful.

This novel, set in Germany during WWII, follows the experiences and thoughts of Bruno, a German boy, whose father is a concentration camp commandant. Bruno's misunderstanding of his world is gradually dispelled as he observes activities in the camp and befriends Samuel, a Jewish boy on the other side of the fence. The book illustrates the effects of oppression and hatred.

In the style of a fly-on-the-wall documentary, the film lifts the lid on one of Australia's roughest diamonds as he juggles family tensions, fatherhood and sewage with charm, humour and unflinching dignity.

Given the subject matter, there are some people who could live without seeing this film.

It is probably self evident that the script is replete with toilet humour, coarse language and religious cursing.

Skin-of-the-teeth stuff

Understandably, the film's marketeers are sick of hearing of the James Bond parallel and prefer that Alex Rider be seen as a hero in his own right. But, given the plot and the espionage action, the comparisons are inevitable. Was James Bond like this when he was 14?

At this age and stage of his life, Alex is a presentable and sturdy schoolboy. As embodied by Alex Pettyfer, he is a handsome, blonde and curly haired young British potential hero, to be imitated by the boys and something of a heart-throb for the girls. But the film doesn't have time for that kind of emotional or sappy goings on.

The film also has a PG rating which means that the action is suitable for its audience. Violence is more suggested than actual, although Alex is not bad at some basic but effective martial arts. At first he uses his wits and a fast-paced chase through London on a bicycle. But, then, quiet uncle (Ewan McGregor) dies and he discovers that this uncle was a secret agent and had really been grooming Alex since he was little to follow in his footsteps.

Alex Ryder's first mission is to infiltrate the baddies headquarters in Cornwall, discover their secrets, and combat various villains (Andy Serkis, Damian Lewis and Miss Pyle as a latterday Nazi-type assistant). Will he save the day - of course! But how will he do it? This leads to some over-the-top escapades and some split-second timing.

Just when you think it is all over, it isn't and there are some more chases through central London and deadly confrontations. And skin-of-the-teeth cliff-hangers.

Managing Shame, Preventing Violence (DVD, 67 min, adults).

This documentary, produced by the Silvan S Tomkins Institute in the US, analyses the characteristics of shame and discusses the link between shame and violence.

Film clips are used throughout the program to illustrate how the different types of emotions that result from shame are manifested through behaviour. The presenter suggests strategies for managing shame and associated behaviour.

A detailed explanation of the strategies outlined in the program and group discussion questions, may be downloaded from the DVD or accessed through www.tomkins.org Suitable for parents and clergy.

Two Brothers (DVD, 101 min, ages 8 - adult).

This motion picture was directed by Jean-Jacques Annaud

(The Bear) and stars Australian actor Guy Pearce and the main stars, two Bengal tigers. The story is set in the south east Asian jungle in the early 1900s. The two tigers are brothers who are separated from each other and their mother after hunters (Guy Pearce) kill their mother. The story evolves until the brothers confront each other and recall their past. A theme of brotherhood and friendship interweaves through this heart-warming move. Rated PG (Low level violence).

Just what should 'the assembly' do?

Liturgy Commission, When reading about liturgy, I sometimes see references to "the assembly." What does this mean? M.P.

It's a good question. At school, gathering as an assembly was a way of reminding everyone of the "big picture" that existed beyond individual classrooms: there was a whole community, unified by commitment to certain principles and practices, with a common motto and uniform. In the Church, the assembly is the whole People of God, ordained and lay people, gathered together at each sacramental celebration to praise God.

It's an important question. "Assembly" comes out of a long civic and scriptural tradition. The Hebrew words (edah, qahal) meant the whole community and those whom God had called together into worship. The Greek equivalent (ekklesia) meant the living, assembled congregation, those with full membership in the Body of Christ (even if they were

The assembly contains people of different ages, ethnicity, gender, social, economic and academic backgrounds gathered for a common purpose. It is, we are, "a chosen race, a royal priesthood, a holy nation." The assembly is a place of God's hospitality, where everyone needs to feel welcome. The liturgy is the place where we Christians bond deeply in Christ, recall our sense of being people of prayer, and recapture our missionary enthusiasm.

There are no spectators in liturgy, no audience, no passive element. All who are present are doers of the liturgy. We gather, speak, respond, sing, listen, praise and thank, remember, offer, proclaim, process, affirm, bless, break bread, share, attend, intercede, exchange peace and accept a commission to mis-

Why is the assembly so involved and active? We are given this right and duty because of our baptism. The shape and quality of worship, then, does not entirely depend on the priest presider, musician or liturgy planners, but on the whole assembly.

Final Confirmation Goulburn like 'home'

ABOVE: Sixty four children, who celebrated the sacrament of Confirmation in St Mary's Parish, Young, were privileged to have Archbishop Francis Carroll officiate at his last Confirmation as Archbishop of Canberra and Goulburn.

He spoke about the fact that some candidates had taken the name of his mother and his recently deceased sister, Rose, which touched him.

Only days after his installation, Archbishop Mark Coleridge visited Goulburn to celebrate Mass in a packed Sts Peter and Paul's Church. The ceremony was marked by the attendance of members of the Knights of Malta and the communities of the Sisters of St Joseph and Sisters of Mercy.

"I came to Goulburn as a stranger, but as I drove into the city and saw the church, I had a strange and deep sense that this was home," Archbishop Coleridge said. While it was the first time he had set foot in the city, and he did not know the people, he already felt that they were his flesh and blood. Archbishop Coleridge is a conventual chaplain ad honorem of the Australian Association of the centuries-old Sovereign Military Order of the Knights of Malta and of Rhodes.

FACTS ON FUNERALS

Burial in Ancient Times

Throughout history, the most common way to dispose of the dead has been burial in the ground.

In some of the earliest graves of prehistoric Europe, stones were often laid on top of the body. It is believed this was done in the belief that this would stop the dead from returning to haunt the living. The feet of the deceased were sometimes tied together for the same reason.

Red ochre was sometimes sprinkled on the body – perhaps representing the blood and strength the deceased would need in an afterlife.

The Vikings sometimes buried the dead under the thresholds of their houses. This was because they believed that the souls of the dead could defend their houses against evil spirits.

Today, burial in the Canberra region occurs in public cemeterie

If you would like to know more about the funeral options available these days, please call (02) 6297 1052.

Changing face of retirement planning

By Zilla Lyons, Regional Manager, Catholic Superannuation and Retirement Fund

Retirement planning is destined to change. The goal posts are being realigned so that retirement planning can no longer be left to the last minute. Seventy may be the new 40, but the most successful retirees in the future will be those who start retirement planning in their 20s as part of an entire wealth creation program. People who fail to plan may not be able to afford to grow old happily. Thankfully, the Centrelink system exists at present to make up the shortfall, but commonsense and the aging population tells us that this may not always be so.

Many property and share market investors intend to sell up just prior to retirement and place the money tax-effectively into the superannuation system. Using retirement income streams, particularly allocated pensions, is widely acknowledged as the simplest and soon to be tax-free method for retirees over the age of 60 to fund their lifestyle.

The Government is trying to encourage people of all ages to contribute to superannuation and have announced that the age-based limits for deductible contributions to super will be abolished and replaced after 1 July, 2007.

Apart from the transitional arrangements (where a $100,000 deductible limit will apply to over 50s until June 2012), a standard annual global limit of $50,000 of deductible contributions from all sources will apply to everyone in the future. Deductible contributions include all Superannuation Guarantee and salary sacrifice contributions and contributions from self-employed persons claiming a tax deduction. Employers and the self-employed will be entitled to a full deduction on any contribution made on behalf of employees or themselves respectively. However, any contribution above the $50,000 limit will be taxed at the top marginal rate (45%), which is a significant penalty on the standard contributions tax rate of 15%.

The recent Budget announcements have also placed restrictions on amounts that can be contributed to superannuation on an after-tax basis. Prior to commencing an allocated pension many people have chosen to deposit significant amounts of money into superannuation on a post-tax basis. The budget proposals include a restriction on the level of post-tax contributions made in one year of $150,000 with an averaging arrangement allowing a person to contribute $450,000 over a three-year period to provide for larger one-off post-tax contributions. It should be noted that the individual making the $450,000 contribution in year one must not make after-tax contributions for the rest of that financial year or the two that follow, but must remain eligible to contribute to super by satisfying the work test if over 65.

Someone aged over 65 who intends retiring permanently in that financial year will only be able to contribute $150,000 as they will not be able to satisfy the contribution work test for the years that follow. Recent media announcements said if someone makes an extra 3% contribution to super, their retirement balance will swell by 30% compared with someone who only receives the compulsory 9% Superannuation Guarantee. This 3% contribution will be further enhanced where the employer or the Government makes a co-contribution.

Queensland Catholic Education employers, as part of an enterprise arrangement, are already matching employee contributions of 5% with a co-contribution of an extra 3.75%. This arrangement alone will ensure the contributing member has often doubled the amount in super on retirement compared with a noncontributing member. With 5% being close to the average annual wage rise or budget tax cut savings, the message is that a small, but persistent, sacrifice to superannuation started early will take the worry out of retirement for even lower paid employees.

It is important that younger people develop a saving plan. This small contribution to super is just one part of their wealth creation plan designed to take the worry away from retirement so they can concentrate on building secure families and homes.

As a result, you should consider its appropriateness to your own situation and obtain independent financial advice before making any decisions about your superannuation.

If you've never read Christopher De Vinck, you owe yourself a favour. He is, I believe, one of the truly moral essayists writing today.

Several years ago, he wrote an essay, Faith in

As a young college student in New York City, he found himself at one point particularly lonely. Part of that loneliness, understandable in itself in a young person, was the dream he nurtured about marriage. He idealised about the woman he one day hoped to marry, a woman who would not only take away his youthful loneliness, but would be

Marriage, within which he shares this story:

and one day, submitting to peer pressure, he consented to go along to a river party, not knowing exactly that this was an arranged tryst between a number of hormonely over-charged college boys and some bored working girls from a neighbouring town. The mathematics had been carefully done and there was a girl, Linda, selected for him.

As everyone else disappeared into secluded spots, Chris was left by himself with Linda, a decent enough girl, probably as ambivalent about what was expected as he was. As she began to undress, he took a step back, then another, and suddenly, impelled by something deeper in him, he

But his essay doesn't end there. He adds this brief, but brilliant, commenend there. He adds this tary: "I did not know that I would be married six years later, that Roe [my wife] and I would be married for 20 years, that we would have three children, but running away from that river that night I hoped that someday Roe would be there, my Roe, clothed with the sun, having the moon under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars."

Another friend shares this story: During his last year in high school he had been painfully and hopelessly obsessed with a girl who looked upon

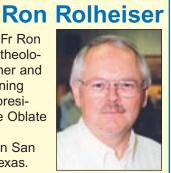

Helpless to fight his obsession, hoping against all hope, he devised a rather elaborate (but pathetic) scheme to try to impress her at a public gathering. made something suddenly clear. Namely, that those moments when we are young and foolish and obsessed are seen in an entirely different perspective and are healed when we are held, feel more whole, and are secure beyond the dangerous loneliness of youth with its in-built temptations against chastity and the future. I'm not sure exactly how we need to challenge our age, especially our youth, in terms of the beauty and importance of chastity. I only know that it needs to be done. Virtually everything in our culture and within youth today militates against it.

> Chastity is seen as a naivete, a timidity, a stance against life, not one for it.

> Our culture has unconsciously inhaled, and misunderstood, one of William Blake's, Proverbs from Hell: "Sooner murder an infant in its cradle than nurse unacted

We try all kinds of approaches to try to convince the world that chastity is important: It's worth waiting until marriage. Your body is a temple of the Holy Spirit. You are worth more

All of those are right, and important. Deep down, beyond the bravado, people actually know the truth of these. At our core, we all intuit the value of chastity.

But that inchoate moral sense, it seems, isn't always enough to make a young man walk away when there's a river party. The deep-down sense that something is not best for us doesn't always, nor often, make us resist temptation when our loneliness and insecurity are high and the time and temperature are right.

What does? I'm not sure, but perhaps the clue lies in Christopher De Vinck's appeal to idealism, to a vision, to a dream deep inside each of us for a soulmate who will come into our lives and be so clothed with the sun that we can renounce a momentary compensation for a future within which we can sit with someone at the place of our youthful longing and humiliation, sip a soda, and laugh about how painful it once was.

How to choose best ISP for you

Ever been in a crowd of people talking about computers and the internet and someone says "who's your ISP?" Then thought to yourself, how do I answer this, or what's an ISP?

ISP stands for Internet Service Provider. These providers are companies that supply your access to the internet, whether it be a dial-up or a broadband connection. There are many companies in Australia that provide internet connections.

In Canberra, some of the ISPs we have access to include: Telsta Big Pond (www.bigpond.com/), CyberOne (www. cyberone.com.au/), OptusNet (www.optusnet.com.au/), (www.iprimus. IPrimus com.au/PrimusWeb/), Velocity (www.velocity.net.au/), Grapevine TranACT's (www2.grapevine.com.au/) and (www.netspeed. Netspeed com.au/). There are many more.

As there are many ISPs available to choose from, so too are there many connection plans. Here are some tips to help you choose a ISP.

Choose an ISP that offers free help with setting up your internet connection as well as free advice 24 hours a day if you have a problem with your connection or the modem you use to connect to the web.

Choose an ISP that offers a wide range of plans. You may wish to upgrade your connection plan.

Always check the fine print of your contract to see if there is a cost involved with upgrading.

Check and compare the internet plans of several ISPs to ensure that the plan you eventually sign up for matches all your requirements.

ACLIweb

Check the costs of internet connection plans to see if there are hidden costs, such as paying for exceeding your monthly megabyte download quota.

Some ISPs will charge you 15c a megabyte for each megabyte you exceed your quota. If you use the internet a lot, this can really add up.

Other ISPs will slow your internet connection from broadband speeds to dial-up speeds if you exceed your quota.

Sails Ocean Sails sails.wordpress.com parishioner of St Thomas Aquinas, Charnwood, has established a project to encourage sailors in wealthier countries to donate sails to remote communities, particularly in the Pacific. Surveyor Peter Gately found his inspiration after visiting Pacific islands as a volunteer. He's trying re-introduce the concept of sails to islanders, which he says could save lives. Used sails from all classes of boats, as well as lifejackets, are among the items he collects. Peter can be contacted at e-mail: petergately @ dodo.

Choosing an ISP

• From Previous Page.

Don't just go with an internet connection plan simply because they offer a free modem.

Check the total costs for the plan, as it may be cheaper to buy a modem yourself and then choose your ISP.

Most free modems are attached to 24-month plans and the total average cost includes the full price of the modem.

Find out what extras you will get by signing up to a particular ISP such as e-mail addresses and web site space.

Most ISPs will allow you to have five e-mail addresses and about 10 megabytes of server space for your own website.

Check around as some ISPs offer more e-mail addresses and you may need them for a large family of internet users.

Make sure the ISP you choose has a local telephone number for dial-in access to the Internet. STD phone numbers are much more expensive.

Ask your friends who are connected to the internet, how they find their ISP.

Are they happy with their connection and the services that are provided? Word of mouth is good advertising for reliable ISPs.

To find out about the wide variety of ISPs available in Australia, some useful websites are:

Topology (http://topology. org/./net/isp.html) an older site and some of the ISPs are no longer in operation.

List of ISPs: (www.thelist. com/countrycode/61/).

To find out more about the comparative costs of various Australian ISPs, a useful website is Broadband Guide (www.broadband guide.com.au/)

Shop around, you are bound to find the Internet Service Provider with the right deal for you.

Prayers

THOU O Mary, Help of Christians, who once experienced the hardship and difficulties of acquiring the temporal necessities of life, look with compassion upon us now faced with the same difficulties and help us to find suitable employment. We are anxious, dear Mother, to be gainfully engaged in work that will relieve our temporal needs, without in any way endangering the spiritual wellbeing of our souls. Direct us to employment that will enable us fittingly to provide for ourselves and our families. We are confident that thou will heed my prayer. O Immaculate Mother grant my request. In return I shall publish thy goodness that others may know the favours thou enjoyest with Almighty God unto His greatest honour and glory. J G.

PRAYER to the Virgin Mary. O most beautiful flower of Mount Carmel, fruit of the vine, splendorous of Heaven. Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in this my necessity. O Star of the Sea, help me and show me herein you are my mother. O Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and earth, I humbly beseech you from the bottom of my heart to succour me in my necessity. There are none that can withstand your power. O show me here you are my Mother. O Mary conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to you (3 times). Holy Mary, I place this cause in your hands (3 times). Thank you for your mercy towards me and mine. Amen.

Dear Children,

Spring is such a beautiful season. God's handy work is everywhere. There are so many wonderful flowers blooming, trees blossoming and leaves are sprouting. New life is everywhere. We are told in scripture that. "All things were created by him and for him. He is before all things and in him all things hold together." You and I have to care for this world God has given us. It is important that we care for the part of the world we are in. We can do so much to help - we can recycle our bottles and papers. We can have a worm farm and feed our food scraps to them to produce rich new soil. And, of course, we can use our precious water carefully. I am sure you can think of lots of ways to help keep our world beautiful. Do write to me and let me know all the ways you can find. We will publish a list of all your suggestions. My e-mail address is ed.voice@cg.catholic.org.au I am looking forward to hearing from you about this important subject.

God bless you all,

Sue

A proud school that lives 'on the edge

Lake Cargelligo school principal Noreen Dick speaks with pride about St Francis Xavier's Primary School and community.

We are part of the Parish of Our Lady of Lourdes, Lake Cargelligo, the last parish and school on the western edge of the Archdiocese of Canberra and Goulburn.

The township has about 1300 people with a real lake which, when holding lots of water, is the scene of water skiing, fishing and lots of picnicking.

The school, with an enrolment of 74 students, fosters the spiritual, intellectual, social, physical and emotional development of each staff member, student and indeed each family member.

The children are grouped into four stages working enthusiastically in all areas of the curriculum.

The staff of St Francis Xavier's are committed, not just to the quality of teaching they provide and present, but also to the connectedness they make between family, school and community.

This means no segment of the community is overlooked nor left out of activities. The Aboriginal teachers' assistants are a vital link between cultural groups and provide home liaison connections.

Literacy and numeracy are major thrusts in the school, and together with religion and IT permeate each curriculum area. The individual needs of the children are attended to, with staff regularly holding discussions and interviews with parents and carers.

A real effort is made to tap into the children's backgrounds and interests to make language work relevant to them. Values education is highlighted throughout the entire school with the Stage 3 children providing peer support to all other stages.

We are proud to be here at SFX and the smallness of the school community fosters a deep sense of belonging and a real concern for the welfare of each other. The children wear the school uniform each day with pride, and the staff also their T-shirts.

For a number of years now, despite some recent rain, the district has been very much in the grip of drought. This impacts not only on those working the land directly, but on all businesses and service providers in the township.

Never say "it's too far to visit"; come and visit and share in the fun, the laughter and the learning and living which St Francis Xavier's and Lake Cargelligo offer.
